

THE FOCAL POINT

VOL. 52, Issue 10

OCTOBER, 2016

Elul - Tishri 5777

From the Rabbi's Study...

As we enter into the Days of Awe, we are encouraged to think about our lives more than any other time of the year. After all, the climax of the Musaf service, the U'netaneh Tokef prayer, proclaims that during the next ten days it will be decided, who will live and who will die in the coming year.

When thinking about life, it's only natural to contemplate about growing older and what lies ahead for us in the future. There is a portion of popular American culture that identifies growing older with personal diminishment and decline. American life is lived in the future tense; tomorrow is always superior to yesterday. Everything that's good in America is new and improved. Ever hear of a product guaranteed to make you look older in only minutes a day? We are a generation that dreads growing older, and spends millions of dollars a year in an attempt to turn back the clock and look younger. Youth means energy, creativity, possibilities. Old is used up.

Judaism teaches a different approach to growing older. Pirkei Avot, the Wisdom of our Sages, describes the different stages of a person's life. At age 5, one studies Bible. At ten, the Mishna. At thirteen, one is responsible for the mitzvot. At fifteen, one studies Talmud. At eighteen, one is ready for marriage. At twenty, one begins a career. At thirty, one is at the height of one's powers. At forty, one achieves understanding. At fifty, one is prepared to give wise counsel. At sixty, one is given the deference of seniority. At seventy, one is considered a sage. Eighty is the age of heroic strength.

From the perspective of our Sages, life is not a tragedy of decline, but each stage of life has its own beauty, value, and measure of success. Growing older is not about surrendering the qualities that make us vital and beautiful. In each age of life, we gain something. Each stage of life brings new qualities; the qualities of learning, love, creativity, wisdom, power. At each successive stage of life, we gain an opportunity to appropriate aspects of divinity. Growing older, we grow Godly.

In the Talmud, the development of the human being doesn't stop with the end of childhood. Grown-ups are meant to keep on growing. 40, 50, 60, 70; each decade brings its own qualities. We're not finished once we become adults. The object of childhood is literacy. The object of our 20's is intimacy. The object of our 30's is achievement. The objects of later adulthood, our 40's and 50's and beyond, are of a different order; understanding, counsel, seniority

From the President...

The High Holy Days are approaching for the New Year 5777, beginning our traditional time of year for introspection. We use this time to express our apologies to our fellow human beings to which we owe them and to Hashem. We also ask Hashem to be allowed to continue this journey we call life.

If we do this correctly we reflect on the previous year of our lives, taking account of what we did that was good and proper, and we account for the things we did that were not. Whether we believe that Hashem actually answers us by granting us another year of life, or that we earn another year of life in Hashem's eyes by being regretful, atoning and sincerely vowing to live a better life in the coming year, and putting that plan into place. Either way we become better people for moving through this process and truly coming out with an action plan to honestly and sincerely live more wholesome, honest and rewarding lives as prescribed by our ancient text, the Torah.

The secular year-end is also fast approaching, which will end my tenure as your congregational president. As I think back over the last three years, I am very happy with the work that the board of directors, the officers and I have been able to accomplish. Without going over the laundry list of extremely positive changes that have taken place within Kehilath Israel, the thing that stands out the most is that we are finally doing the critical thinking necessary to allow the synagogue to survive. This survival will probably have to be in fashion somewhat different than we have seen over the last 30-40 years, but this is what it takes to progress, survive and thrive into the future. This is what has come of the focus groups, interviews, group meetings and all other forms of congregant input into what you felt is necessary to improve our shul. Some of your requests have already been put into action, some will require board and congregational action, and some will require changes that our congregation must decide upon and take action in order to advance. Some of these changes may mean space sharing with another congregation. Others may mean a merger with another congregation and allowing both a more traditional service performed within the congregational community as well as a more non-traditional, possibly egalitarian service offered within the same four walls. The most important goal of this critical thinking is the advancement of Judaism within the Kansas City community at large. If you look at the numbers of religious participation in general and especially the Jewish and wisdom. These are qualities of the inner life, qualities of the soul.

So yes, as we grow older there might be certain things that we cannot do that once came so naturally; however, if we have grown as a person, our life experiences have provided us with new knowledge and new skills that allows us to continue to be vital and give new meaning and purpose to our lives.

May we always remember to appreciate the positives in all stages of our lives, and be thankful for all the blessings that we have been granted.

TASHLICH

Tashlich comes from the Hebrew word meaning "to cast," referring to the intent to cast away our sins via this meaningful and ancient Jewish custom common to both Ashkenazi and Sephardic communities, and is performed on the first day of Rosh Hashanah (Second day if first day is Shabbat).

Tashlich is preferably recited alongside a body of water containing fish, to remind us that just as fish are protected by the water in which they live, we pray to be protected by God. Also, just as fish swim freely and can suddenly be caught in a net, so too we can just as helplessly fall into the net of sin. And even as the eyes of fish are always open, so do we pray that God, too, will keep a vigilant watch over his people.

Needless to say, the physical motions near the water and fish of Tashlich are not what grant us atonement. But if we pay attention to the symbolism and apply the sincere desire to heal our relationship with God as portrayed in the physical demonstrations of Tashlich, then it serves as a crucial part in the process of repenting and returning to God in purity.

Please join in and participate in the Tashlich service by meeting on the first day of Rosh Hashanah, Monday, October 3rd at 105th and Conser over Indian Creek at approximately 6:15 p.m. Tashlich will conclude in time to return to the synagogue for the 6:45 p.m. Mincha and Yom Tov Maariv.

participation rate, the vision of a meteorite falling to earth comes to mind. There are hundreds of opinions as to what has brought us to this point and what we need to do to correct it, but one thing remains fact, if we don't provide a viable platform for those wishing to participate in organized religion, there won't be any.

My family and I wish to take this time to wish each and every one of you an very happy, healthy, prosperous and rewarding 5777. I also wish to tell you what an honor it has been for me to serve you these last three years. Your encouragement and support has been nothing but fantastic. I began this venture with the thought that I wanted to leave K.I. in better condition than when I took office, and that will remain one of my proudest accomplishments. I want to wish you all the best that life has to offer!

KREPLACH MAKING CLASS AT K.I. A BIG SUCCESS!

We had twenty women and men attend the kreplach making class. Dan Kass, master kreplach-maker (in his mind), reincarnated the class which was originally taught five years ago by Dan and his son, Simon. Simon is now the executive chef at the RND Corner Grille restaurant in Lawrence and was not available to teach. But, Dan has been making kreplach for 16 years now, ever since his mother, Millie, passed away.

Millie made kreplach for the family for as long as Dan can remember. All three grandsons used to help her assemble them as they grew up. Unfortunately, she didn't share her recipe. However, Dan found a recipe and has improved on it each year. For example, the easy way to seal the ends is to dip the folds into water and then pinch them together...almost a guarantee that they won't fall apart when you boil them.

After demonstrating how to make the dough, each participant took a small batch and then made their own kreplach. For the $12 fee, they each got to take home a dozen. Everybody seemed to have a good time, and it looks like this could become a repeating class. The next class might be matza balls or Dan's very favorite, lukshen kugel (using Wilma Walker's recipe).
